RECREATIONAL FARM

The land was intended to be a leisure garden used only on weekends. The traditional farm was transformed into a recreation spot with main elements as water, plantation and a big terrace for the client's gatherings. Key elements are the large, deep natural pond in front of the house and the swimming pool at the back. Organic design forms express the client's wish for natural design. Locally mined rocks are used to form walls and special arrangements. Existing old trees and palms have been integrated successfully into the new landscape. The garden's great scenery convinced the client to move from his town house to the farm for his daily living.

INTERNATIONAL ENERGY FORUM AUTHORITY

The clear design language which forms the landscape of this building is rare in today's Riyadh. Mainly simple forms and few materials are used by the designer. The low level plantation enhances building's sense of ease, making it appear to float on a green carpet. Around the terrace larger lawns are arranged to provide sufficient space during receptions and gatherings. Different materials in the colors black, blue and red symbolize different energy resources. The black one represents oil and coal, the blue one stands for water and the sparkling red for lightning and fire. The selected illumination enhances the beauty of the garden and the building.
